Another doctor leaves

BY ANDREA MACLEAN
Didsbury Review

Didsbury has lost another doctor.

Dr. Suhail Abbasi, who was based out of the Didsbury Medical Clinic, closed his Internal Medicine practice in recent weeks.

The town has had past difficulty retaining doctors. An ad hoc committee was established in Didsbury about a year and a half ago to assist in the recruitment and retention of doctors.

"It was formed when the concerns arose around doctors leaving and retiring. We were down to one or two doctors," said Mayor Brian Wittal.

Now, Didsbury has five full-time physicians and doctors in outlying areas (such as Carstairs) have hospital privileges at Didsbury Hospital. In April a new clinic, Silverfern Medical Clinic, was opened.

"We were able to stabilize ourselves," said Wittal.

And yet Didsbury just lost another doctor.

Wittal was unsure of Abbasi's reasons for leaving but speculated that it may have been due to frustrations within the system. The shortage of facilities and the inability to get extra help within the Calgary Health Region for rural doctors could be potential reasons for Abbasi moving his practice to Airdrie, said Wittal.

"I don't want to get into it," said Abbasi, when asked why he left after more than a year in Didsbury. "The reasons are social and political. I don't want to get into specifics."

But he had one clear frustration. "I didn't feel that I had any support from the town," he said.

However, Wittal says that Abbasi never contacted the town with any concerns that he had. In fact, he said, there was very little interaction between Abbasi and the mayor or the town at all.

Shiraz Jaffer, the director of the Didsbury Medical Clinic where Abbasi was based, claims that the town does not treat its clinics equally.

"It's very one-sided," he said. "The town is being unfair to the clinics in the sense that they have been putting all their eggs in the new clinic (Silverfern), and all other clinics have been short-changed."

Jaffer said he believed Abbasi left because he wasn't getting support for his practice.

"The reason he left was because the doctors in Didsbury were not referring any patients to him, and if they were, it was few and far between, and he wasn't getting support from the town."

The town, he said, was not ensuring that other doctors referred patients to Abbasi.

But, according to Wittal, it is not the responsibility of the town to ensure the success and demand of a doctor.

"The last thing we want to do is interfere with a private practice. It's not the town's responsibility to ensure that this is a viable practice. We can't guarantee that a certain number of residents will go to a physician," said Wittal.

Colleen Gustavson, the Didsbury Economic Development Coordinator, said other physicians, such as Dr. Andrew Jackson and Dr. Segun Adewale who are based out of Silverfern Medical Clinic, have successfully established themselves in the community.

Wittal said doctors in town are optimistic that their practices will do well and will grow. But should any difficulties arise, Wittal says that they can expect support from the town.

"If there are problems down the road we may go with them (the doctors) to the Calgary Health Region to see what we can do to help," he said. "I've always told them that if they have any issues, I am open at any time for them to call me. If there's anything we can do to help them provide a better service we want to know."

Abbasi said he enjoyed serving the community while in Didsbury and his patients are welcome to contact him in Airdrie at the AppleWellness Centre for further appointments. "I don't want to desert them, so they aren't without health care."

High speed chase results in officer hit, vehicle rolled

BY JENNIFER WILSON AND MICHAELA LUDWIG
For the Review

Innisfail RCMP are still coping after one of their own was struck down by a car during a high-speed chase on Highway 2 which ended in the capture of suspects northwest of Didsbury.

The male officer was deploying a spike belt near the Old Pole Road when he was hit by the vehicle fleeing police. Media reports have indicated the officer was Const. Danny Knight, but police have not confirmed his identity.

As of Friday he remained in hospital with serious, but non-life-threatening injuries. He has been a member at the Innisfail detachment for four years.

"We're all incredibly saddened," said Innisfail RCMP Cpl. Rochelle Becker.

"Naturally, everyone is feeling hurt for him and we wish him the best."

But she said it will continue to be "business as usual" around the detachment.

"We're police officers. This hasn't changed anybody's opinion about being an officer, it just makes us more diligent," said Becker.

"Our job can be dangerous, but it's just a fact of the job."

The officer's ordeal began on Wed., July 30 when around 10:30 a.m. RCMP responded to a complaint near the Alberta Sports Hall of Fame in Red Deer that a man was throwing rocks at motor vehicles on Highway 2 and jumping into traffic. When confronted by police, the man jumped into his vehicle and fled southbound down the highway. The suspect refused to stop for police and a pursuit was initiated.

In an attempt to stop the vehicle, a spike belt was deployed near the Old Pole Road north of Innisfail. The Innisfail RCMP officer was positioned well out of the driving lane of the highway, but according to police, as the suspect vehicle approached, the driver directed his car toward the officer, striking him.

The officer was seriously injured but conscious at the scene and transported by ground ambulance to hospital.

"His condition is unchanged," Const. Sabrina Grunow, with the Red Deer City RCMP, said Thursday. "He still has serious injuries, but they are not life-threatening."

She could not comment on the extent of the officer's injuries, except to say "his injuries are consistent with being struck by a motor vehicle."

After striking the officer, the suspect vehicle continued travelling south along Highway 2. During the pursuit, an officer reporting back to police dispatch on his radio reported that the car was travelling at speeds of up to 120 km/h.

After the vehicle drove over a spike belt near Olds, it continued for a short period of time until the driver lost control and rolled the car near Amerada Road. The male driver and a female passenger were apprehended, treated for minor injuries and taken into police custody.

Police have now charged Kenneth Janzen, 24, of Saskatoon with a variety of offences, including three counts of attempted murder. Along with the officer that was struck, police say that two additional RCMP officers were in position to deploy a spike belt when Janzen directed his vehicle toward them, causing the suspect vehicle to roll.

Janzen has also been charged with kidnapping, in relation to the female passenger in the car during the pursuit, who was also known to him.

"The passenger has been released from police custody," said Grunow.

Janzen also faces one count each of the following charges: criminal flight from police causing bodily harm, failure to stop at the scene of a collision, criminal flight from police and obstructing a police officer. He appeared in Red Deer Provincial Court on Thursday, to answer to the charges. His next court appearance is scheduled for tomorrow, Aug. 6.

The investigation into the pursuit still continues. Grunow explained that the RCMP have policies and procedures to follow during a pursuit, and there is always a review conducted after a chase.

"We are constantly monitoring it and reassessing it to ensure that the risk to the public as well as the members is reduced and that there is valid reason for (the pursuit)," said Grunow.

The pursuit involved a variety of detachments from Central Alberta including the Innisfail RCMP, Red Deer Rural, Red Deer Traffic Services, Red Deer City RCMP, the Olds detachment, Innisfail Freeway Patrol, Red Deer Police Dog Services and Didsbury RCMP.

The investigation continues with the help of the "K" Division Serious Crimes Branch, RCMP Collision Analysts, Southern Alberta Traffic Services and Red Deer Forensic Identification Services.

"We're police officers. This hasn't changed anybody's opinion about being an officer, it just makes us more diligent."

Blood donor clinic successful

BY ANDREA MACLEAN
Didsbury Review

Didsburians impacted the lives of up to 354 people after giving blood during last week's donor clinic. Canadian Blood Services calls the July 28 Didsbury blood donor clinic a success. The mobile clinic collected 118 units of blood, two units short of its goal. Each unit of blood can help save or improve the lives of up to three patients. One hundred eighteen people between the ages of 17 and 64 came out to donate. Of those, 11 were first time donors. Lisa Castro, Community Development Coordinator for Canadian Blood Services said new donors are essential to help support the demand for blood.

"We have to bring in 90,000 new donors each year to meet our hospital demands because of the turnover of those going out of the system. It means a lot to have the first time donors. We want them to come back for their second, third and fourth donation." When a unit of blood is donated, it is typically used within a week and officials estimate that every 60 seconds someone in Canada needs blood or a blood product. To donate, call 1-888-2-DONATE (1-888-236-6283) or attend the upcoming donor clinics on September 29 and December 1 at Olds College Student Alumni Centre.

Police briefs

BY MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

July 19 — At approximately 4 p.m., RCMP responded to a residence in the Didsbury area after an individual broke into the home and assaulted the female resident. The victim was known to the assailant and the suspect had previous warrants.

July 24 — RCMP responded to a residence in Didsbury to investigate an assault in progress. Upon arrival, police found two males fighting. One person was charged with assault causing bodily harm and has been remanded into custody.

July 17 — At 5 p.m., police responded to a break and enter complaint at a home in Carstairs. Upon arriving home, the homeowner found over $6,000 worth of electronics to be stolen and a safe was broken into.

July 26 — Police responded to a vehicle break and enter in Didsbury. During the night an individual broke into a vehicle and stole two boxes of onions, some pickles and hamburger buns.

Counterfeit money - Police would like to warn the public about an influx of counterfeit $50 American bills. The bills have been found throughout southern Alberta and have made their way to the Carstairs-Didsbury area.

One Carstairs business received six counterfeit bills in one night.

Police are asking residents to be vigilant about the bills and to be suspicious if someone pays with $50 American bills.

The number of occurrences of counterfeit money being used in the Olds area is on the rise.

According to the RCMP in 2007 there were a total of three occurrences of counterfeit money being passed while already in 2008, there have been five occurrences of counterfeit money being used.

In 2007, the most common counterfeit bill being passed was the Canadian 20 dollar bill said Const. John Boles with the Olds RCMP. So far this year, there have been two occurrences of Canadian bills being passed, a five dollar bill and a 20 dollar bill, and three occurrences of American bills being passed.

Lifeguards deserve credit for helping to save a life

Re: Jesse's story in the July 8 and July 15 editions of the Didsbury Review

After reading the articles in the July 8 and 15 editions of the Didsbury Review on the near-fatal drowning of Jesse Fuller, I was surprised that so little attention was given to the valiant response of the two lifeguards who were responsible for Jesse's survival.

They performed their duties with the utmost skill and professionalism, in true heroic fashion.

As a former lifeguard, we all know the importance of water safety, and know that it is vital that children and adults know how to swim. While drownings take a large toll around the world, there is some good news. Hundreds of thousands of lives are saved every year by trained lifesavers and lifeguards. Thankfully for Mr. Fuller, there was a happy ending to this story, for which we are all grateful.

Legion seeks past members

The Royal Canadian Legion is proud to announce the publication of a Military Recognition Book to help identify, recognize and never forget our military veteran personnel from Alberta/N.W.T.

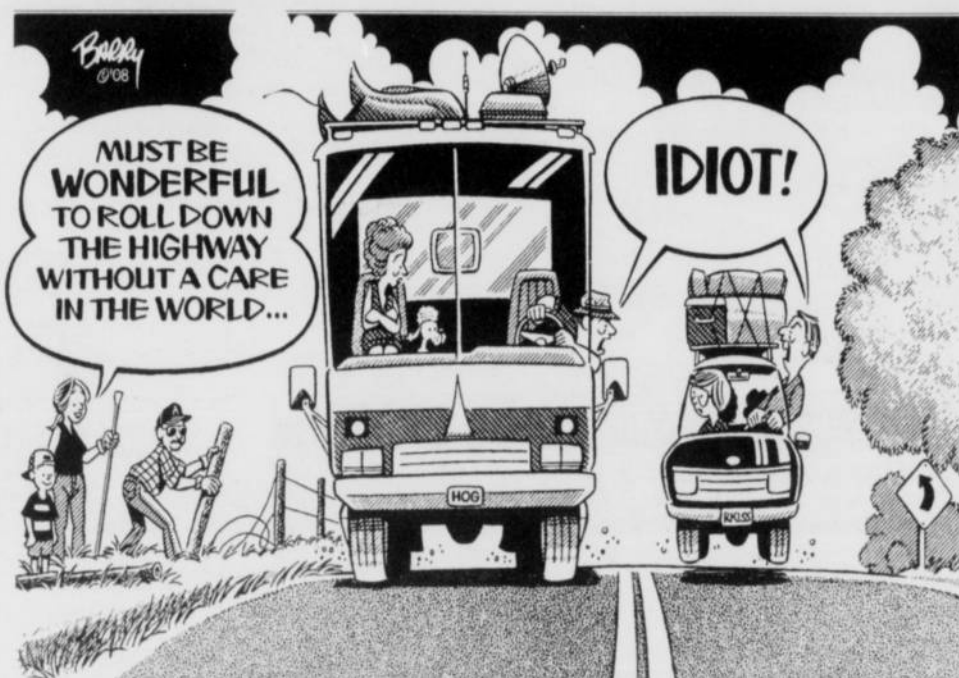

The branch has been requested to submit names, photographs and history of all its local and surrounding area veterans and serving armed forces members.

This is where you come into this most important project! We are requesting your support in providing timely submissions of individual histories and photographs (which will be returned) of our local veterans and serving members. Listed is a sample of some of the information you may want to include in your submission:

1. Veteran's / Serving member's name
2. Service information, unit, medals, where he/she served
3. Personal information, date of birth, etc.
4. Short story or information on life history
5. Relationship to Royal Canadian Legion, if any Submissions to:

Provinces must take lead

DAVID SNOW

In the last decade, housing conditions have deteriorated for many Canadians, and the relative dearth of affordable housing is raising alarms.

Rental vacancy rates have reached staggering lows in many Canadian cities, spending on shelter has outpaced income growth, and energy costs continue to rise.

In 2005, fully one-quarter of Canadians spent 30 per cent or more of their income on shelter. Low-income renters have felt the affordability squeeze the hardest and many have been forced into homelessness.

In September, the provincial housing ministers are set to meet in Newfoundland and Labrador. It is expected that Monte Solberg, the federal minister responsible for housing, will also attend. With funding for four federal housing initiatives – the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, the Homelessness Partnering Strategy, the Affordable Housing Initiative, and the Affordable Housing Trust – set to expire in March 2009, there is a growing concern among housing advocates that Canada is on the cusp of a housing crisis.

Looking across the border at the American housing problems, Canadians are getting nervous. Calls for a national housing strategy, ubiquitous since 1968, have never been louder.

The expiry of federal programs should indeed cause concern. Since 2001, the federal government has assumed an important role in the provision of affordable housing, albeit as a funder rather than an administrator.

However, something else should also raise eyebrows: While government spending on housing has risen substantially since 2001, affordable housing and homelessness conditions have actually deteriorated in that time.

This anomaly should not go unnoticed by the provincial housing ministers. After their last meeting in April, the ministers criticized the federal government for a lack of support, but did little in terms of analyzing their own policies. In aiming to improve housing affordability and reduce homelessness, the ministers should keep the following points in mind:

- Shelve the hyperbole of a national housing strategy. There are numerous problems related to affordable housing and homelessness, and each province has a different housing priority. For example, Manitoba needs to focus on restoring dilapidated rental units, Saskatchewan on fostering sufficient rental development in anticipation of population growth, and Alberta on developing supportive housing for its growing homeless population. Even within the West, a "one-size-fits-all" strategy risks ignoring unique provincial concerns.

- Provinces need to take responsibility. Constitutionally, housing is a provincial responsibility. And given diverse housing markets and conditions, that's a good thing.

While the federal government has traditionally had a strong role in the housing sector, provinces now administer most housing programs, own most of the social housing and spend more than the federal government on housing. As arbiters of housing policy, provinces need to shoulder responsibility and set their own targets.

ability and set their own targets.

- Focus on best practices. There are countless strategies that have been used to increase affordability and decrease homelessness in Canada, the United States and many other countries.

These include social housing, rent supplements, shelter allowances, inclusionary zoning, tax incentives for rental development, and supportive housing, to name a few.

The ministers need to determine which programs would be most successful in their respective provinces.

- Set goals with the aim of increasing affordability and decreasing homelessness. The sole goal of most federal/provincial cost-shared housing initiatives has simply been to develop more social housing units, with no targets for actually increasing affordability.

For many provinces, the only current housing target seems to be lobbying the federal government for more money.

When provincial housing ministers sit down in September, they should push the federal government to continue funding for housing, and to make long-term commitments.

But provinces need to show that they have – and will – put the money to good use. They need to show that they can develop programs that suit their current housing needs, and that these programs are capable of improving affordability and reducing homelessness.

In short, the provinces need to hold up their end of the bargain. Before they ask for more money for housing, they should have some idea of what they're going to do with it.

RCMP warn against public consumption of alcohol

MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

Didsbury RCMP is reminding residents that public consumption of alcohol is not permitted and will not be tolerated.

The warning follows numerous incidents that occurred during the Carstairs Beef and Barley Days in which numerous visitors were caught consuming alcohol in public places.

Const. Robert Newton of the Didsbury RCMP said members spent most of the days dealing just with alcohol related issues, including several incidents where patrons would lie to officers or become confrontational.

Newton said officers gave an "abnormal amount" of verbal warnings to people about not drinking in public.

He warns that that if such acts continue, various organizations and events could lose their liquor licence.

He notes that most patrons were willing to dispose of the alcohol after a verbal warning and he expresses his gratitude to those individuals.

"There were some great people to deal with," said Newton.

"Anybody who was like that didn't get a ticket, not a chance... that's the proper way to deal with the police, polite and honest."

He reminds residents that drinking will not be tolerated unless done in a designated, fenced off area, and that drinking can't be done within the immediate vicinity of a vehicle.

He emphasized that officers will be out for the upcoming Mountain View Musical Festival and will be looking for such infractions.

Backyard festival morphs into entertainment event

BARNEY BENTALL

Submitted

MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

It started in 2006 in Jason Valteau's backyard with 300 people and one big idea. Since then, it has expanded to Memorial Park, and now encompasses the entire town of Carstairs and nearby Didsbury. At first glance it may sound like the start of a world domination plot, but rest assured it isn't—or at least that's what this reporter was told.

No, this brief trip back in time is about all a person needs to know about the scope of the upcoming Mountain View Music Festival, which runs from Aug. 8 to 10.

The festival is the brainchild of local band The Polyesters, a group that really needs no introduction in this area, but for those living on Mars the last few years, here is all you need to know: it was created by brothers Jason and Sheldon Valteau and they're super awesome—well, that's what they say anyway.

The festival aims to bring in musicians from multiple genres and different talents to the Carstairs Memorial Park for an unforgettable weekend.

"It's better than TV, it's better than radio, it's live and it's interactive," said Jason, "Bring your lawn chair (because) it's for the family; it's friendly and it's not competitive."

This year the band expects an audience of over 3,000 to swarm Memorial Park to listen to over 20 different musical acts, totaling over 40 hours worth of music.

This year's headliner is Barney Bentall, with other acts from artists such as Sillan and Young from Calgary, Tom Philips and Men of Constant Sorrow, The Culls, Third Reel of Calgary and of course, the Polyesters. Rest assured, there's plenty more talent where those came from.

Genres this year range from country, to celtic, folk, rock, alternative and much more.

Jason emphasized that this year's festival won't only be the largest one yet, but will serve as one of the largest events in the county.

"We're bringing a lot of people to this town during the festival, and the people who have been here already can't wait to get back."

Since its humble beginnings as a small backyard festival, the event has grown almost out of control, leaving Jason and Sheldon with a lot of weight on their shoulders—not that they're complaining or anything.

Jason attributes the popularity to word-of-mouth and the connection artists have with each other. Furthermore, people have greater access to music now, leaving them craving a live show.

"This is something that since the Internet and MP3 downloads, everybody has access to music and what's happening now is a lot of people want to see their heroes play, so it's boosting the live music scene."

This year's show has some new additions to it, including a kids' zone, which includes inflatable play centres, clowns and face painters. The Dixiland Band will be back, and Dan the One Man Band (a hit during Beef and Barley Days) will be back in town.

After hours entertainment includes shows from Claymore at Hurricane Corner on Friday and Saturday, and The Plaid Tongued Devils at Barley's Pub on Saturday.

Once again, Randy and Mr. Lahey of the Trailer Park Boys will be back in Didsbury on Friday at the Didsbury Inn.

The festival will once again include a beer garden and overflow camping will be permitted at the Carstairs Rodeo grounds.

Jason said visitors won't only have a good time and hopefully take interest in some new music, but will "go back (home) with a warm fuzzy feeling from Carstairs and Mountain View County."

For those needing a break from the ringing in their ears, the Carstairs Chamber of Commerce is hosting a Show and Shine on 11 avenue on Sunday, and breakfast will be served Sunday morning from 7 to 10 a.m.

"The (show) has been run well enough that people are thinking this is a good place to be; it's a nice weekend to come out to see some music," said Jason.

"Hopefully everybody is ready for this... if they want (Carstairs) to be put on the map, we can help."

Admission is free, however visitors are asked to make a donation to support the festival.

For more information or to volunteer, please visit www.mvmusicfest.ca, or call Jason Valteau at 337-0074.

Did you know?

Did you know that Alberta has the highest concentration of beekeepers of any province in Canada? About a third of the bee hives in Canada are located in Alberta. There are about 733 beekeepers in the province. On average, Alberta bees produce close to 30 million pounds of honey. Honey bees continue to fly and collect honey as long as there is daylight, which is why an average hive in northern Alberta produces 200 pounds of honey per hive with the long, summer days, and their southern cousins only produce about 50 pounds of honey per hive in a season due to shorter days.

Community supporter celebrates 10 years giving back

A community outreach project which turns donations of household goods into cash to support local groups and events is about to celebrate a decade of service.

Ev Peters, founder of the Household Goods Thrift Store, came up with the idea to set up the now 10 year-old store while volunteering at the Knox United Thrift Shop.

The Knox store accepts only donations of clothing and footwear items - basically anything that can be worn. But Peters says people would want to drop off hardware items and store workers would have to turn them away. That's when Peters said she realized Didsbury really needed another store for household items.

She approached the Zion Church and asked if the church would be interested in having a thrift store as a community outreach project.

Timing was perfect, said Peters, and the answer was yes. Her husband Dan purchased the building, and several months later Peters had the store up and running. That was August of 1998.

Within two weeks of opening the store, Peters knew it would be a huge project and many volunteers would be needed. "We have been so blessed with great volunteers throughout these 10 years. Some of the volunteers have been there from the first year we opened. It's a wonderful place to come in and shop, visit, and volunteer. We have always tried to maintain a warm family atmosphere in the store, and many friendships have developed through it," says Peters.

The motto for the store became "reaching into the community in a practical way."

Too often the church is seen as separate from the community, but not so with Zion Church, says Peters.

The store profits are used for many community projects and events. Support has been given to restoring several playgrounds, grad scholarships, summer Bible camp sponsorships, town summer day camps, Backdoor youth events, STARS air ambulance, Mountain View Food Bank, citizens on patrol, local fireworks, Christmas hampers, among others.

For the last several years, the store has also given a yearly donation to Calgary Mustard Seed Street Ministry. But Peters says most of the profits do stay within the Didsbury area.

Two years ago, after Peters faced a set-back with breast cancer, Sylvia Derksen was hired as co-manager.

"I don't know how I managed the whole store all these years by myself. We are both kept busy all day long," says Peters.

This fall she plans to take several months sabbatical. "I have the privilege to go to Rwanda with my husband Dan. We will be working with the Home of Hope project. I am very excited about this opportunity to volunteer in a different capacity."

Peters plans to resume her position at Household Goods after returning from Rwanda.

"I love my work at the store, and can't think of anything else I'd rather be doing."

All the volunteers and staff at the store and church would like to say a big thank you to Didsbury and surrounding area for what Peters calls incredible support over these past 10 years.

"We hope to continue serving as best as we can."

The store invites the public to a celebration marking the decade milestone Aug. 13 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Checker's parking lot next to the store. They plan to have beef on a bun, cupcakes, and coffee.

PLATINUM AWARD - Sarah Braun accepts her plaque during a ceremony last month

4-Her achieves highest honour

BY ANDREA MACLEAN
Didsbury Review

A long-time Didsbury 4-H member has achieved what 99 per cent of her fellow 4-Hers will never do.

Twenty-one-year-old Sarah Braun - who is currently living in Red Deer while she attends college - became one of 69 people to receive a platinum award for 4-H this year.

Only about one per cent of 4-H members will ever receive this top honour.

Terry Potter, the 4-H leadership and resource development specialist, said the platinum award is achieved through participation, leadership and service in the 4-H program.

Throughout their years in 4-H, members are awarded points for activities done within their club, region, district and province. Awards are given to members based on how many points they accumulate. After earning 90 points, a member receives a bronze award followed by a silver award at 150 points, a gold award at 220 points and finally the platinum award.

"It takes about three to four years to achieve each level. Members typically don't get the platinum award until the senior years."

TERRY POTTER
4-H leadership and resource development specialist

"Most of the district and regional activities, like camps, I do by choice. But the club events like public speaking, meetings or working with charities - such as the food bank - you have to do," said Braun.

However, these honours do not come quickly.

"It takes about three to four years to achieve each level," said Potter. "Members typically don't get the platinum award until the senior years."

It took Braun nine years to accumulate the 320 points required to receive the platinum award.

Most members, Braun says, earn about two points per month, one from attending a meeting and one from participating in an activity.

Braun was more involved than an average member.

As part of the West Didsbury 4-H Beef Club for the majority of her 4-H career, she found ways to earn extra points.

"When I was in Didsbury, I was on the district and regional council," said Braun. "I helped plan events."

Planning events, she said, earned her two points rather than the one point that other members received for attending the events.

This past year, Braun was a member of the Red Deer West 4-H Club while taking pre-vet at Red Deer College. She helped the club win Best Overall Club at the Red Deer and District 4-H Steer and Heifer Show - a first time honour for this club.

Now, at the age of 21, she can no longer be a member of 4-H as members must be between the ages of nine and 20.

Braun plans to continue working with the Red Deer 4-H Club as a volunteer and will become a member of the 4-H Alumni in order to continue actively participating in the program.

Weekend to End Breast Cancer draws hundreds

BY MARK LAYCOCK
For the Review

On July 26, four Carstairs women were among hundreds to set off on a two day, 60 kilometre walk across Calgary. And if you asked them today if they'd do it again, they'd be ready to go tomorrow without batting an eye.

The women, Amy Taylor, Lisa Schielke, Natalie Kuitic and Samantha Miller, all took part in the 2008 Weekend to End Breast Cancer, and managed to raise up to $12,000 for the Alberta Cancer Foundation.

The four women were part of the team "Titty, Titty, Bang, Bang," and since the start of the year had been training for the event in hopes of making their own contribution to the cancer cause.

Up to 1,400 people participated in the event, raising over $4 million.

"I've been telling people that it was one of the best experiences of my life; I feel a little bit changed by it. It's hard to describe the feelings, there's so much raw emotion on the walk and the energy of all the supporters... is so inspiring and humbling," said Lisa.

While not a cancer survivor herself, Lisa's mother Carol is a 10-year survivor and a former registered nurse at Foothills Hospital, who now resides just outside of Cremona.

Throughout the race, Lisa said her mother would phone her constantly and provide her with encouraging words.

"I'd tell her what I was seeing, I'd tell her about the pit stops; she could hear everyone screaming and honking their horns."

The walk began at the Roundup Centre at 7 a.m. on Saturday, with participants revving to go for the day's 32 km walk.

Amy said the first day proved challenging, not only because of the daunting hills that were hiked, but the psychological battle going through runners' minds.

"(At first) it went through your mind, 'Oh my gosh, what am I doing?'" she said laughing.

Natalie agreed, but noted that the cheer squads and residents of Calgary were out in full force, helping walkers forget those thoughts.

Natalie's sister-in-law is a 15-year survivor, but also lost her mother to lung cancer five years ago.

"Cancer is cancer, and if they can find cures for one kind of cancer, it could help another kind," she said.

When Amy signed up for the walk, she said she didn't know anybody who was affected by breast cancer—until two weeks later when a co-worker was diagnosed.

She notes her co-worker is doing great, but it has been an emotional ride "because all of a sudden it's more personal."

Along the way the women ran into a few interesting characters, including one man who travels across Canada to participate in cancer walks. This particular event marked his 25th time.

"He said to me, 'Our blisters are nothing compared to their tears,'" said Lisa.

Memories of time in the woodshed

JOYCE HOEY

"Do you need to go to the woodshed?" Those words carried great power at one time. Not many years ago parents wielded authority and spankings were a definite force in discipline.

In my parents' time, the woodshed was more than just a storage shed for the wood pile and saws and axes. It was a site to obtain a switch for an errant child's instruction. The child was often sent to secure the switch himself.

The woodshed was a vital outbuilding on the small farm in the early to mid 20th century. Most homes were heated with wood and coal. It was essential to keep those fuels dry, as many learned to their detriment. Burning green wood presented a real danger. A buildup of soot and creosote within the chimney often resulted in a fire. On one occasion Dad says a neighbour driving past hurried in to alert him to just such a fire. Dad rushed up onto the roof and dumped salt on the fire to extinguish it. He then used a chain rolled into a ball and dragged this up and down the interior of the stack. The residue dropped into the base of the chimney, which was fitted with a small access door from which Dad was able to remove the debris.

After that episode Dad was careful to age the wood. He made frequent jaunts into the back regions of the farm, cutting trees with the gas power saw and hauling in as much as the half-ton could hold. These logs were piled neatly and allowed to dry some months. Carol recalls huge sheets of plastic tented over the pile to protect it from moisture, then the sheets flipped back to let it breathe on hot days.

When pile No. 1 was dried long enough, the logs were reloaded into the truck box, for a short trip to the woodshed. Dad attached a large belt to his Allis Chalmers tractor and with that power ran a small table saw. The machinery was lined up close to the woodshed.

Our shed was roomy, about the size of a small bedroom. It was constructed of roughly planed slats, some with bark still attached. The slats stood upright and formed a weather-proof enclosure. The front wall held a door and a large framed window opening.

When Dad set to work cutting his load into foot-long pieces, he flung each piece into the shed through the window opening. One or two kids were positioned to stack the pieces of wood neatly against the walls. I don't recall having chunks of wood actually being chucked at me, so presumably he rested to allow the stackers to stack.

We always had a good supply of wood in storage, besides the second pile aging. One of my chores was to split the wood into kindling, the smaller pieces necessary for lighting the fire in the stove. I also chopped lots of wood to fill the wood box every day after school. (That wood box sat beside the cook stove and was eternally hungry and empty). The chopping block was usually a thicker log; it had to be sturdy with a very flat bottom to assist this junior woodcutter. I learned to wield the axe but didn't have a lot of power. I rarely split the log with one crack. The axe head wedged partway through and I had to work hard to finish the job.

I will confess my sad crime for which I still get teased by my siblings. Our loyal border collie, Tippy, was my best friend and we hung out together whenever I was outdoors. Maybe we were too close? I once cut poor Tippy's nose as she hovered nearby, helping me at the chopping block. I remember her yelp and my cry. She carried a scar the rest of her life.

The old woodshed has become a relic, a dim memory of days gone by. By now it has likely crumbled in upon itself. I thought it was firmly secure in my mind, but discussion with my sisters brought up different pictures. I can still hear the whine of the saw, the rhythmic thunk of the chunks of wood landing inside the shed and smell the clean, fresh scent of sawdust.

Did you know?

(MS) - Diatomaceous earth (DE) is a chalk-like substance made from ground fossilized diatoms (a type of hard-shelled algae) used in a number of applications. It can be used to filter out solid waste in wastewater treatment plants. It is also often added to swimming pool filters to improve removal of debris. Perhaps its use as a natural pesticide is one of the most beneficial applications for homeowners. The material can also be used as a safe method of insect extermination in and around the home. DE penetrates the insects' exoskeleton and works by dehydrating the insects. Because it is absolutely safe for people to handle, it is a good option for individuals who want to control bugs but have concerns about chemical pesticides. It is suggested to dust areas where insects might frequent with the DE, such as under appliances, along the perimeter of rooms, in basement crevices, and around the exterior of the home. An application puffer can be purchased to apply DE, but some people use a paintbrush or turkey baster to get the job done.

Canola growers warned about insects

With the price of canola still hovering over the $12/bushel mark the economic threshold for several insect pests is much lower, and spraying decisions are more critical than ever before, according to the Canola Council of Canada.

Canola growers now have access to an important tool that can help with those decisions thanks to a project partially funded by the Canola Agronomic Research Program.

"Bertha armyworm season is on its way, and a second generation of diamondback moths may yet emerge," says Matt Stanford, agronomy specialist for the Canola Council of Canada. "Remember that the economic thresholds may be much lower because of the current price of canola."

Insect forecast maps available online at provincial government websites provide accurate, up-to-date assessments of bertha armyworm, diamondback moth and cabbage seedpod weevil at no cost.

The forecasting maps are prepared by provincial and federal agriculture departments and are available 24 hours a day, seven days a week to help canola growers make informed decisions about insect control measures.

Canola insect forecast maps for Alberta, Manitoba, and Saskatchewan can be found at:

Bergen hosts international sculpting symposium

Four internationally renowned sculptor artists arrived in Central Alberta this week for the Bergen International Sculpture Symposium.

This August, the sculptors will be creating monumental sculptures at a private acreage near Bergen at the event sponsored by local artist Morton Burke.

The sculptures will be created from sandstone, a locally significant material and B.C. marble.

From August 9 - 30 the public is invited to visit Burke's acreage, with its rustic barn and breathtaking views of the foothills to watch the sculptors in action.

Throughout the event there will be an art show on site featuring members of the Sculptors Association of Alberta (SAA) and members of the Atti2ude Club.

On August 9 and 10 and on Aug 30 there will also be an Art in the Park event on site, with 30-50 artists from around Alberta participating. Sculptors from Alberta and B.C. will assist the participants throughout the symposium, which is endorsed by the S.A.A.

The event is being organized by the "Atti2ude" club (an organization of artists and art administrators with members in 11 countries) and sponsored by Burke, a local artist who has participated in similar symposia around the world.

Burke wanted to bring the collective and creative experience of a symposium to his own backyard. Unable to rouse interest in the idea initially, Burke decided to organize and fund the symposium himself.

The response from sculptors around the world was impressive. Initially he selected five from a long list of those who were willing and interested. Funding for the fifth sculptor fell through and the number was narrowed to four.

TRICK, LUCIANNE MAE

Lucianne Trick of Carstairs passed away on Sunday July 27, 2008 at the age of 72 years. Lucianne was the first child of Dorothy Elizabeth Mary Stearns (Jackson) and Wesley William Stearns of Acme and was born on 10 February 1936.

Lucianne Stearns was married to Gerald Euston Trick of Carstairs on 10 November 1956 and enjoyed her 51st anniversary in 2007. Lucianne had the opportunity to ride horses to school, and received her early education in a one room school called Green Acres. She later took her high school in Acme and was president of the Student Council. She studied to become a teacher at the University of Alberta, then situated at the S.A.I.T. campus. Lucianne had completed her teaching certificate and started teaching just prior to having 5 children.

Lucianne enjoyed teaching, and taught school at Acme, Springbank, and the Hutterite Colonies, and then for 30 years at Hugh Sutherland Elementary. She taught Grades 3 and 4, but mostly she taught Grade 5. She also instructed classes such as music, science and library. She would often love to tell stories of the great "Grade 5 Campers". Upon retirement from the School Division, Lucianne began to teach music privately and later operated the TopNote Music School in Didsbury that helped many people and organizations.

Lucianne was a very active and involved person who gave so much to the community. She started as a telephone operator in Acme and Carstairs when she was going to school. She enjoyed singing at weddings and gatherings. She helped with Christian Girls in Training, United Church Women, Carstairs Rodeo, Girl Guides, Carstairs Science Fair, Weight Watchers, Didsbury Fiddlers' Jamboree and Carstairs Community Chest.

Lucianne had her first stroke on 25th April 2008. Lucianne fought a good battle from her first stroke and had recovered fairly well from it. Her second stroke occurred on the 25th of July 2008, which caused further complications. She passed away in Foothills Hospital on 27 July, 2008 at 11:27 a.m. A special thanks to all the wonderful medical staff who helped incredibly throughout her visits in hospitals in Didsbury, Foothills and Fanning Centre. Thank you for all the wonderful people who came to visit Lucianne or sent flowers, cards, or gifts. When she was in the hospital it really cheered her up to know you were thinking of her. Lucianne is lovingly remembered by her husband Gerald, and children Lana, Mona (Marsovksy), Teena (Wilks), Mike, and Lloyd Trick. She has four grand children: Dana, Brendan and Kayla Trick, and Wesley Wilks. Lucianne comes from very close family, and is lovingly remembered by her brother Frank Stearns, and sisters Sheila Yuschyshyn and Ruth Good. She is also fondly remembered by Vaclav Marsovsky and Chris Roney (sons-in-law), Silvia Trick (daughter-in-law), and Flora and Bob Wooliams (sister- and brother-in-law).

At Lucianne's request there will be no funeral or memorial service. In lieu of flowers, donations in Lucianne's memory may be made to the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Alberta, NWT & Nunavut, 200, 119 - 14 Street NW Calgary, AB T2N 7A2.
